Foreword

Symbols of American Libraries is a dictionary of the abbreviations used to identify libraries in union catalogs, bibliographies, and other compilations which require the naming of institutions in a brief space. It is a master list not only of symbols used by the Library of Congress but of those developed by many other bibliographers, and by reporting these symbols it reduces the possibility that the same symbol will be used for more than one institution. It is therefore a basic reference tool for those dealing with reports of library holdings and for those who may be organizing new forms of library cooperation on regional or national levels.

This edition contains 19,245 symbols, of which 15,947 are approved for general use. Of the latter, 12,586 represent libraries in the United States, 2,660 represent Canadian libraries, and 544 are symbols for libraries in other countries. There are 157 symbols for commercial producers of microforms. One-hundred-ten of these are located in the United States, 13 in Canada, and 34 in other countries. In addition to these 15,947 symbols, the list contains 3,298 symbols that are obsolete or are variant forms of the approved symbol. Appropriate references are made from obsolete or variant forms to the authentic symbol.

History

When Charles Evans wanted to report that a certain library held one of the titles listed in his American Bibliography he assumed that BPL would immediately identify the Boston Public Library, and that HC could only mean Harvard College to the intelligent reader. But Sabin used just B and H in his Dictionary; others used BoP and Har, or B.P. and CH. As bibliographies followed one upon another it became incumbent on each editor to include an explanation of his abbreviations. When a library wished to refer to other libraries, it adopted the abbreviations used by the reference work it most respected or invented new abbreviations of its own.

In 1916 the discovery that the Universities of Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Wisconsin were all about to publish lists of their serial holdings, independently of one another, gave rise to a cooperative movement on a national scale which eventually produced the first Union List of Serials in 1927. The size of this project required the creation of many new abbreviations for libraries, and since reporting institutions were to be found in every state, Frank Peterson of the University of Nebraska worked out a mnemonic system of symbols which identified a library by its state and city.

Peterson's scheme was of special interest to the Union Catalog in the Library of Congress, which had been greatly expanded by "Project B," financed by a Rockefeller Foundation grant of 1926. In April 1932, at the conclusion of the Rockefeller project, a modest pamphlet entitled Key to Symbols in Union Catalogs was published by the Library of Congress to identify the 367 libraries represented in the Union Catalog at that time. A slightly enlarged edition appeared in January 1933, and a more substantial Key to Symbols used in the Union Catalog, containing 685 entries, was issued in August 1936.

As additional libraries began to send reports to the Union Catalog, the Library of Congress assigned them appropriate symbols. Eventually some of the symbols assigned by the Union List of Serials began to conflict with those needed for new contributors to the Union Catalog; and for some years there were attempts of various kinds to harmonize all LC symbols with those of the Union List of Serials or, on the contrary, to harmonize the ULS forms with the LC mode. The situation was not improved by the appearance in 1937 of Winifred Gregory's American Newpapers, 1821-1936, which assigned symbols in the Peterson scheme without securing the concurrence of the Union Catalog.

These problems were given a new perspective when Douglas McMurtrie produced Location Symbols for Libraries in the United States in October 1939. This list was prepared "for the use of . . . the staff of the American Imprints Inventory of the Historical Records Survey Program" and contained 12,000 symbols representing every public, college, and university library in the United States. Unfortunately, most of these libraries did not report to the Union Catalog; but years later a regional cooperative project, in all good faith, would adopt the McMurtrie symbols for its own use without consulting the National Union Catalog, only to learn that LC had meanwhile shortened the seven-letter McMurtrie symbol to three letters and had assigned a conflicting symbol to an industrial library not included in the McMurtrie list.

In 1941 McMurtrie published a Proposed List of Location Symbols for Libraries in all countries of the world except the United States. In this list he divided the world by continents, countries, and cities, so that Eu-Fr-P was the symbol for Paris, France, and An-C-T represented Toronto, Canada (America, North). Although this proposal did not survive the massive revision of boundaries and names resulting from the Second World War, some of its Canadian symbols were put into use before the creation of the national Canadian scheme, and these are still found in some Canadian references.

Symbols Used in the Union Catalog of the Library of Congress appeared in 1942 as the fourth edition of the Key to Symbols. A fifth edition was published in 1953, quickly followed by a 1954 edition which reflected the inauguration of New Serial Titles and the conversion of Canadian symbols from the McMurtrie format to a new system sponsored and maintained by the National Library of Canada.

To keep the size of the list within reasonable bounds, libraries were dropped from later editions if they had not reported to the Union Catalog since the previous edition. One of the principal values of the list was negated by this economy, for duplicate assignment of symbols was almost inevitable unless each of the previous editions was consulted. Fortunately, most of the libraries that were dropped did not recommence reporting. But some of the more complicated problems encountered in assigning symbols arose because of the absence of cumulative records of the symbols that had been assigned.

As the Library of Congress continued to issue new editions of its symbols list, it gradually became apparent that the National Union Catalog was the one nationwide project which outlived the publication of individual bibliographies or the organization of groups of libraries for specific programs. By a kind of default, it devolved upon the Library of Congress to assign new symbols to libraries even if the libraries were to be involved only in regional projects of some kind. For this reason the 1969 edition of the list symbols was called simply Symbols of American Libraries, with only a subtitle reference to the National Union Catalog. In recent years it has become common for cooperating libraries to secure LC approval before employing symbols in a bibliographic project. The responsibility for library symbols was assigned to the Catalog Publication Division upon its organization in 1970, and it is there that the work of Frank Peterson, Douglas McMurtrie, the compilers of the Union List of Serials, and many others has found a home.

Contents

This edition includes all the symbols found in the following bibliographies and union catalogs: the National Union Catalog, including its Pre-1956 Imprints; New Serial Titles; the Union List of Serials; the National Register of Microform Masters; Newspapers in Microform; the Bibliographical Center for Research, Rocky Mountain Region (Denver); New England Library Information Network (NELINET, Wellesley, Mass.); New Jersey Historical Commission (Newark); Pacific Northwest Bibliographic Center (Seattle); and the Union Library Catalog of Pennsylvania (Philadelphia). In addition, it includes the symbols used by many smaller groups or projects.

This edition also includes symbols used by the Library of Congress to designate foreign libraries and domestic and foreign commercial institutions. This is not an attempt to establish a national or international classification for these institutions but is rather a response to internal needs felt by many departments of the Library of Congress. While other libraries are free to employ these symbols for their own purposes, the Library of Congress will not undertake to assign such symbols beyond the internal requirements of its own departments.

All addresses given in this dictionary are designed to be complete for mailing purposes. Almost every public, college, and university library in the United States can be reached without a street address if the proper ZIP code is given. Street addresses have been added where the ZIP code number is not sufficient.

The Mnemonic System for U.S. Libraries

Because libraries rarely move from one city to another, Peterson's system of mnemonic symbols was based upon geographical location, and this system of designating libraries was adopted by the Library of Congress. Commercial firms do move about, however, from city to city and state to state, and the symbols that have been created for them are based upon the name of the company rather than its geographical location. This permits continued use of the same symbol even when a company has moved to another state or country.

Although there are exceptions to every statement, the following general principles are observed in establishing symbols for libraries according to the mnemonic geographical system.

1. The most concise abbreviation is the most desirable. For this reason, the states that were most active bibliographically at the time the system was created were given a single-letter designation, since it was supposed that they would have the largest number of libraries to be identified. Thus the symbol for New York State is N, that for Massachusetts is M, and that for Wisconsin is W. Other states whose names begin with the same letter are identified by addition of a lowercase letter to the initial capital letter: Md (Maryland), Mi (Michigan), and so forth.

2. Each symbol consists of a minimum of one unit and a maximum of three, each unit commencing with a capital letter. The first unit represents the state; the second unit generally represents the city. Again, the largest cities have the shortest symbols: N is New York City, P is Philadelphia. Thus NN signifies the city of New York in the state of New York. The state and city units become more evident in a symbol like NhNa, representing Nashua, N.H. In both cases the second capital letter introduces or forms the second unit of the symbol, the city designation.

3. For the sake of simplicity and uniformity, the city designation is omitted in the following cases:

(a) The official state library is identified only by the state symbol (N, Mo, In, etc.).

(b) The state university is identified by a capital U following the symbol of the state, without mention of the city in which the university is located (OU, TxU, IU, etc.).

(c) The state historical society is symbolized by Hi without reference to the city of its location (WHi, MnHi, ViHi, etc.).

(d) Finally, a few libraries which participated in the earliest bibliographic projects have retained the symbols that were assigned to them before the geographical code came into existence, for example, MH (Harvard) and CtY (Yale).

4. When the public library of the city is represented, a symbol consists of two units. This obviates the endless repetition of P or PL as a third unit of the symbol. In some cases the public library of a city also serves as the county or regional library headquarters. Memorial names are not acknowledged in the symbols.

5. A third unit is added to the designation if the symbol represents an institution which is not a public library. This unit also begins with a capital letter and may contain as many other capital or lowercase letters as are required to differentiate one institution from another in the same city. In some cases this is a simple matter. MSaE is the symbol for the Essex Institute in Salem, Mass., and MSaP symbolizes the Peabody Museum in the same city. But PPiUSM is required to distinguish the U.S. Bureau of Mines in Pittsburgh, Pa., from PPiUS, the symbol for the United States Steel Corp. In large cities the unit structure of the symbols is easily obscured when several capital letters are used successively. For example, PPFRB is the symbol for the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia. The letters FRB taken together constitute the third unit of the symbol; they do not form third, fourth, and fifth units.

6. A dash employed in a symbol indicates that the library is a part of the larger institution symbolized by the letters preceding the dash. Thus ICU-L represents the Law Library of the University of Chicago, and DN-Ob symbolizes the Naval Observatory, a division of the U.S. Department of the Navy in Washington, D. C.

The workmanship of so many persons has gone into the creation of library symbols that there is a wide variety of applications beyond these basic principles. Abbreviations for cities and towns are found in numerous configurations. CPor is the symbol for Porterville, Calif., but CEv represents Emeryville, Calif., and NNopo is the symbol for Northport, N. Y.; Niagara Falls,

N. Y., has the symbol NNia, but New Rochelle uses NNer and River Forest, Ill., has IRivf.

In many instances these interpretations represent the different approaches of new assigners of symbols who came to their task some years after the earlier symbols were created. Historical evolution is also evident in the symbols for many state universities. These universities often have passed through a development from normal school to teachers college and state college before becoming a state university. In some cases the symbol for the institution has been changed three times, but in a few instances the state college retains a T in its symbol or the state university has a C instead of a U because there was no pressing need to make a revision.

Symbols of Foreign Libraries

It has long been standard practice in the United States to use Ca as a prefix for symbols designating Canadian libraries. This precedent has been followed by the Library of Congress for foreign libraries in general. The symbol for the country may consist of the first letters occurring in the name of the country (Ne, Netherlands), an abbreviation (Hk, Hong Kong), or a special configuration (Vn, Virgin Islands). The latter was created to avoid conflict with the symbol already established for Virginia (Vi). The designation for the country is then followed by elements representing the city—or in the case of Canada and the Soviet Union, the second unit is the province or constituent republic, respectively, followed by the city—and the institution, according to the pattern established for the United States.

To facilitate the sending of symbols by teletype, the National Library of Canada in 1973 revised all Canadian symbols which contained lowercase letters to consist only of capital letters. Since institutions in the United States must still add the prefix Ca to Canadian symbols in order to distinguish Alabama from Alberta, Massachusetts from Manitoba, and Ohio from Ontario, this list retains lowercase letters whenever they occur in Canadian symbols. However, the reader should be aware that in Canada CaQSherSC is not only written without the Ca but now appears as QSHERSC.

It has been suggested that the symbols for institutions in the United States should follow the example of Canada and be converted to all capital letters, but over the years so many symbols have been created which differ only in the capitalization or noncapitalization of the same letter that suppression of all small letters would create chaos. For example, COC is the symbol for the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, Calif.; COc indicates the Oceanside, Calif., public library; and CoC represents the public library of Colorado Springs, Colo. Again, COCC means California Concordia College in Oakland, Calif.; CoCC represents Colorado College in Colorado Springs, Colo.; and CoCc is the symbol for the Canon City, Colo., public library. Other examples include MNS and MnS, MSM and MsM, NB and Nb, NBu and NbU, and NCaS and NcAS. If such symbols can be transmitted only in capital letters, a designator will have to be inserted to indicate which of the letters is in lowercase in the actual symbol.

Symbols for Commercial Firms

For commercial enterprises, the symbol consists of an abbreviation of the firm's name. The abbreviation may include the entire name, e.g., BMI for Bay Microfilm, Inc., or be modified in some way, e.g., EpG for EP Group of Companies. Since there is no geographical significance to commercial symbols, they do not consist of distinct units.

Arrangement

Beginning with the 1969 edition, Symbols of American Libraries has been photocomposed from machine-readable data and arranged by the computer in two parts. The first section is an alphabetical list of symbols. Because the state symbols bear only slight relation to the spelling of the state names, the states do not appear in the alphabetical order of their names. For example, the alphabetical arrangement of the symbols N, Nb, Nc, Nj, and Nv creates the sequence New York, Nebraska, North Carolina, New Jersey, and Nevada.

The entries in each major grouping follow a large heading which signals the grouping by displaying the first unit of the symbol.

Symbols for foreign countries appear in the same sequence as those for the United States, but they have been assigned country designations that do not conflict with state designations.

Within any geographical sequence there may occur symbols for commercial firms which do not have a geographical orientation. At first glance it might seem desirable to place these in a separate alphabet, but since it is not immediately evident that, for example, McE (Microcard Editions) is not a geographical symbol, it seems best to include all types of symbols in one sequence to facilitate use of the list. In general, it will be found that commercial firms tend to group themselves into rather distinct segments because they have been assigned symbols that do not conflict with the name of any state or country.

Within any state or country, the second unit of the symbol, representing the city, is filed alphabetically after the state or country designation. This second unit may consist of only one capital letter, and in large cities will be followed immediately by the initial capital letter of the third unit, as in NNYU, the symbol for Yeshiva University, New York, N.Y. Smaller cities like Niagara Falls have second units consisting of both capital and lowercase letters (NNia). These capital-and-lowercase symbols appear in the list after all the symbols which contain the capital letter alone. Thus NNYU precedes NNia because YU is a third unit added to a short city designation (N) which precedes a longer city designation (Nia). In all symbols, a third capital letter always indicates a third unit in the symbol, whether or not any lowercase letters have intervened. Within a given city the third unit is again filed alphabetically, with symbols containing only capital letters being listed before those which have both capital and lowercase letters. Thus the order is, for example, NNCP, NNCS, NNCSH, NNCenC, and NNCoC in New York City.

The second part of the list is arranged alphabetically by the name of the institution. Here the name is in the first position and the symbol follows at the end of the entry. As an additional service to users, cross-references are provided from former names to current names.

Inquiries

Requests for new symbols or for changes in existing symbols for U.S. libraries should be addressed to the Library of Congress, Catalog Management and Publication Division, Symbols of American Libraries, Washington, D.C. 20540. New symbols or changes in existing symbols for Canadian libraries should be requested from the National Library of Canada, Ottawa, Ontario. Correspondence concerning purchase of this publication should be addressed to the Cataloging Distribution Service, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20541.
